Futrell & Bailey

Editorial by Alex. H. Washburn

The country judge to whom Hempstead county gave 78 per cent of its entire vote two years ago is up next Tuesday for re-election as governor.

This newspaper has faith in Futrell. We believe he should be re-elected.

But there are men in the Futrell administration we can't say as much for. Some of those men personally hate Carl Bailey, candidate for attorney general—and we recommend that if you want to endorse the best part of the Futrell administration and keep a check on the worst part vote for Futrell for governor and Bailey for attorney general.

The old governor's "friends" have let him in for some deserved criticism in months past.

Howard Reed's daughter, speaking in Hope Tuesday night, scored Futrell for three things:

1. Reading Carroll D. Wood out of the Democratic primary in order to hand-pick C. E. Johnson for chief justice.

2. Putting 14 Futrell kinsmen on the state's payroll.

3. Using convict guards at the state penitentiary.

You read these things FIRST in Hope Star. You read editorial criticism of these things FIRST in Hope Star.

If one mistake of Futrell's has been kept under cover I don't know what it is. But on the other hand, every governor's campaign you ever heard of has been fought upon the ancient issues of committee despotism, the hiring of relatives, mishandling of the state penitentiary, and horrible conditions at the state asylum.

X X X

Futrell hasn't done much on these ancient questions, which, like the tariff, go on forever.

He has been too busy on the hardest political problems that ever face a statesman, and the most unpopular—the reduction of state expenses and the refunding of the public debt.

Futrell is hated by the old statehouse crowd. The hand of every disappointed job-holder is set against him—for he said he would cut the state's running expense in half, and he did.

Here's comes Howard Reed, for 5½ years comptroller, heading an army of professional political job-holders under two past administrations. They want to throw Futrell out.

There's nothing wrong with Howard Reed personally.

Neither is there anything wrong with Governor Futrell personally.

It's just a matter of who's behind them, and how many.

Reed rode with the army of statehouse employees down the road to state bankruptcy.

Futrell has brought Arkansas back up that road part-way—for one reason, because he carried fewer with him.

It is incredible that the people will turn their backs on the man they elected to rescue them in 1932 and go over to the man who was in high office from 1927 until Futrell put him out.

X X X

The mistakes of Futrell are fresh in memory from yesterday's headlines.

The mistakes of Howard Reed are buried in the books of 1927-32.

Let's leave them there.

Roosevelt Puts in Wednesday Visiting Mayo Clinic

ROCHESTER, Minn. —(P)—President Roosevelt shared the spotlight Wednesday with Rochester's most famous citizens, the Mayo brothers, as the city combined its entertainment for the chief executive with honoring the great surgeons.

Roosevelt praised the world-renowned physicians, Drs. William J. and Charles H. Mayo, operators of the Mayo clinic, for their services. He said:

"True distinction is in the simple fact that you put men's sense of brotherhood and interdependence into a new setting and give it a new meaning."

Blevins Boy First in State Contest

Quinton Derryberry Takes 4-H State Honors at Fayetteville

The state 4-H Club meeting at the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture last week was attended by 4-H club boys and girls from Hempstead county.

Quinton Derryberry from Blevins was high point man in judging the marketing of perishable products, thereby winning first place and state honors.

Joel Kinsey from Spring Hill won second place in Harmonica contest.

According to Frank R. Stanley, county agent, the boys and girls attending from the clubs in Hempstead county are to be congratulated for honest work and for their conduct while in Fayetteville.

Bailey Lashes Out at Leffel Gentry in Audience Here

Declares Norwood Agents Are Conducting Whispering Campaign

THE LAW MACHINE

Bailey Describes Workings of Norwood's Special Counsel

Carl Bailey swept into Hempstead county Tuesday afternoon in his march upon the attorney general's office of Arkansas with a speech upon the lawn of the First Baptist church that is probably the best stump address heard in this city this year.

Mr. Bailey, Pulaski county prosecuting attorney who is opposing Attorney General Norwood in a two-man race, was introduced by A. H. Washburn, and spoke from a sound truck that had carried the candidate to 72 cities and towns in every section of the state.

Mr. Bailey said: "The present attorney general wrote me two years ago a letter of congratulations for my legal accomplishments as prosecutor of the Sixth district. Today he has changed his mind."

"Norwood has used the attorney general's office to hire lawyers to do things which the taxpayers were already paying Norwood to do."

"As prosecuting attorney I have represented all the county officers. I told them I didn't need to hire outside lawyers. As prosecuting attorney I would represent them in all official county matters."

"Nobody got sued for following my opinions."

"The reason for that is, I gave only one opinion on each question."

"Second-Class Lawyer"

"You see, as Norwood says, I'm only a second-class lawyer."

"Maybe when I grow older, and more experienced, I'll learn how to give two opinions on each question—and become a first-class lawyer like your present attorney general."

"A first-class lawyer, they tell me, is a lawyer slick enough to get into office and hire other lawyers to build up a political machine."

"Norwood has done that."

"He has hired so many special counsels that they are some closed banks in Arkansas where the lawyers have gotten more money than all the depositors put together."

"And in some cases this has happened in communities where the public schools were already shut down for lack of funds."

"In Little Rock a Norwood special counsel got $5,000 for carrying a check across the street from one office building to another."

"Norwood has served five terms as attorney general by election, and a sixth by appointment—in reality he is asking the voters today for his seventh term in a state office. He has been in public life for 50 years, holding office ever since he was 20, by special dispensation of the legislature."

"You would think that in those 50 years he would have a record on which to build his campaign—but no. Instead of that, he builds his entire campaign on my own measly 3½-year record as a prosecuting attorney."

"He isn't campaigning on the record—he is making his campaign a personal vilification of me."

"His henchmen are circulating slanderous stories about my private life—stories they can't prove and dare not put in print."

Leffel Gentry

"I see Leffel Gentry out there in the crowd distributing pamphlets for Norwood. Go back to your boss, Mr. Gentry, and tell him the people of Arkansas won't stand for any whispering scandal-mongers."

"When I visited my mother this spring I found her crying. Somebody had written her a poison-pen letter. The anonymous writer of this cowardly letter had said: 'Read what the people of Arkansas think about your rotten son.'"

"Norwood denies responsibility for this whispering campaign—just like he denies responsibility for the acts of his deputy attorney generals that have cost the taxpayers of Arkansas millions of dollars."

"Norwood says I am egotistical. It is true that I have prosecuted matters beyond the mere duties of the prosecutor's office. I stopped a large-scale steel that was swallowing up Pulaski county's road revenue. I investigated the issue and saved the county so much expense that it was able to cut the rate from 2 mills to 1 mill."

"I am not egotistical to apply the powers of public office to the increasing number of common citizens—then I played guilty."

"There is nothing vindictive in my attitude toward these public plunderers. Men with the vision to apply public money to vast really developments are usually brainy. They are dangerously engaging. They are dangerous."

"I hurt these men because I had to choose between hurting a few and letting thousands of helpless commoners suffer."

Norwood Charges Conspiracy Between Bailey and The Star

And Star Admits It Helped Bailey Even More Than Norwood Thinks—Just as It Helped Boyd Cypert Two Years Ago

Editor The Star: I read your false and sloppy editorial in The Star boosting Carl Bailey, also the separate article regarding him. I have been told that he bought 3,000 copies of the paper. Only you and Bailey know whether he agreed to do this as a consideration for you giving him the boost.

The editorial says that I said that I am opposed by a buck private. That is a lie and you knew it when you wrote it. You made the false statement to try to create the impression that Bailey was a soldier in the World War, when you know he was not. Two of my boys were at the front when the Armistice was signed.

You said that I was reversed by the supreme court on the cost-plus contract opinion. You know that opinion was written without my knowledge by Claude Dury, who was at that time an assistant attorney general, and that I brought the suit to invalidate all cost-plus contracts and was sustained by the supreme court. The assistant who wrote the opinion is now supporting Carl Bailey and gave a dinner for Carl Bailey at the Lane Hotel in Rogers on April 21, when Bailey announced his candidacy for attorney general.

You criticize me for holding that under an act passed in 1933 holders of warrants of less than $100 against the highway fund should be paid in cash. I did give this opinion and it is true that the supreme court held that under the technical terms of the act this could not be done. My views were so absolutely correct that afterwards a special session of the legislature passed an act directing that the warrants be paid in cash just as I had held that they should have been paid under the first act.

You say that Norwood's agents are slandering Carl Bailey. I think you lied about that. Your readers would probably have been glad to know of what this slander consists.

My time is too valuable to try to answer all of your false and misleading articles.

I am, with my usual contempt for you, Yours Truly,

HAL L. NORWOOD
Candidate for Attorney General
August 1, 1934
Little Rock, Ark.

P. S. If your readers wish to know about how the affairs of the attorney general's office are conducted I wish they would ask Leffel Gentry, a Hempstead county boy who is now connected with the attorney general's office.

X X X
Now I'll talk a while.

Hal Norwood is wrong when he says Carl Bailey bought 3,000 copies of last Saturday's Star from me.

He didn't buy 3,000—he bought 5,000. What he paid me was the cost of the extra white paper—and if Bailey hadn't been able to stand that much I'd have paid it out of my own pocket.

I'd go hungry to rid my state of an office-holder like Norwood—and he knows it.

This newspaper smashed him in this county two years ago when we endorsed Boyd Cypert for attorney general.

Today we are backing Carl Bailey for the same purpose—to beat Norwood.

And if Bailey doesn't beat him we'll

Routine Business for City Council

Report of City Health Board Filed But Is Withdrawn

Routine business was practically all that was brought before the city council at its meeting Tuesday night.

Dr. W. R. Alexander, member of the city health board, submitted a report to the council but later withdrew it to make additional copies of the report before filing with the city clerk.

Contents of the health report were not disclosed.

A petition to re-open the Roberts dance hall on East Third street was rejected.

The council voted not to assume gasoline debt for FERA road construction work in the city unless these projects were first brought before the council and approved.

A report of a proposed sidewalk project leading to Hope Basket factory was read, but no action was taken pending further study of the plan.

All monthly bills were ordered paid, concluding the meeting.

Salesman Asserts Straw Vote Fraud

Pulaski Free Press Solicitor Signs an Affidavit

LITTLE ROCK.—After L. H. Lipsey, advertising salesman for the Pulaski Free Press, signed an affidavit Tuesday saying that he had decided to resign because of the "methods of the publisher of the Free Press which he uses in trying to coerce candidates and others to purchase advertising."

Walter M. Purvis, candidate for representative, filed in the Arkansas Supreme Court a petition asking for rehearing of the court order which granted a writ of prohibition restraining Pulaski Chancery Court from hearing a suit against the publication.

The affidavit alleged that the straw vote sponsored by the Free Press is fraudulent; that not more than 1,800 ballots have been received; that many of these are in the same handwriting; that the straw vote has been "conducted" solely as a method of forcing candidates to advertise.

Purvis made similar allegations in a complaint filed in Chancery Court, but J. G. Soukseen and H. C. Erickson, publishers went to the Supreme Court and obtained the writ to prevent trial by Chancery Court.

"The action of the petitioners in publishing and circulating said fictitious and fraudulent straw ballot creates so much confusion among the people of Pulaski county as to constitute a public nuisance, and the Chancery Court in not holding that the petitioners are enjoined from continuing to circulate said ballots, is in violation of the law."

Miss Reed Scores Futrell for Not Accepting Debate

Candidate's Daughter Attacks Governor's Record in Speech Here

CITES WOOD CASE

Hand-Picked Judge, Hired Own Family, Used Convict Guards

Howard Reed's school-teacher daughter, Miss Bernice Reed, stood on the stage at the First Baptist church lawn Tuesday night and told a Hope audience why she believed her father should replace Governor Futrell.

They Do Debate

MORRILTON, Ark. — Governor Futrell and Howard Reed, his opponent for the Democratic nomination for governor, met in a verbal battle that lasted approximately four hours and a half here Tuesday night.

Governor Futrell began speaking at 3 p. m. and spoke about an hour and a half. Before he completed his speech, Reed arrived and spoke as soon as the governor had finished. He criticized Futrell for two hours and the governor came back with a 30-minute rebuttal.

Reed spoke for 15 minutes and Governor Futrell gave a 10-minute rejoinder.

Futrell, who is seeking re-election.

She was introduced by Dr. Don Smith.

"My father," she said, "was appointed state comptroller by Governor Martineau in 1927 and served in that capacity five and a half years."

"Governor Futrell constantly reminds the people of that fact, and accuses my father of all kinds of crimes. But when my father was comptroller the office was merely a bookkeeping job, with a small appropriation, and its authority was limited to checking the legislature's figures. Today the comptroller has vastly different powers."

Devil the Governor

"We challenged Governor Futrell to meet my father in a debate in 10 cities, he to pick five, and my father to pick five. But Governor Futrell wouldn't do it. He knew if he accepted he'd have to prove his charges against my father; and he knew if he refused we would devil him to death—and we're doing that."

"Governor Futrell has transferred the Arkansas political machine from the highway department to the revenue department. The revenue department which under Parnell cost $388,000, is costing under Futrell $1,006,000."

"Futrell boasts that he carried out his pledge to lower automobile licenses by one-half—but he omits mentioning the fact that he raised the gasoline tax."

"He lowered passenger car licenses but raised truck licenses."

"He says he has reduced the running expense of state government by 50 per cent. But he doesn't tell you that under his administration the state hasn't built a mile of highway with state funds."

"He doesn't tell you that 2,000 schoolhouses are closed."

"He doesn't tell you that for two months the state treasury office was locked up tight and therefore they couldn't spend anything."

"Governor Futrell says it is undemocratic of my father to oppose him for a second term. But what's a second term for if not to repudiate unfaithful public servants?"

Betrayal of Wood

"Governor Futrell wasn't a good Democrat himself when he kept Carroll D. Wood, a life-long Democrat, off the party ticket so that his own campaign manager might be hand-picked for the supreme court."

"Governor Futrell kept one pledge, however. He said he 'would take care of his people.' He did take care of his people—he put 14 members of his family on the state payroll."

"The governor is asking you to endorse constitutional amendments and is proposing a school program which would limit the free public education guarantee to a six-months term through the eighth grade."

"My father promises you to do better than such a disgraceful thing. He promises to do it without resorting to a sales tax or an increase in the property tax. The legislature can find ways to get additional money."

"Governor Futrell has let Arkansas pass up $1 million dollars' federal aid for schools and other things, that our neighboring states have gotten."

Borrow for Schools

"My father will help the schools—but not by a sales tax or an increase in the property tax. Arkansas might borrow from the R. F. C. at low interest over a period of 40 years, instead of 15 years as the present administration does."

"The state could from its own cotton bank, and that bank could borrow from the R. F. C. at low interest."

What have girls done with all the time they expected to have for bubbling down hair?

103½ Degrees Here, 110 Peak in State

Arkansas Swelters in Fierce All-American Heat Wave

By the Associated Press

Scorching temperatures burned again Wednesday a midcontinent territory already hard-hit by heat waves and drought.

The heat extended from the Rockies to the Appalachians, and southward to the Gulf states.

Four deaths from the heat were reported in Iowa.

Arkansas suffered high temperatures, with 110 at Jonesboro, 103 at Little Rock, 106 at Fort Smith, 103 at Pine Bluff.

The Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment Station reported Wednesday as the second consecutive day with a maximum of 103½ degrees.

High for the season, as reported by the experiment station, was 105.

Long Holds Edge in Orleans Fight

Likely to Keep Registration Books Until September

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(P)—Senator Long's guardians were ordered Wednesday to be more careful about shooting at people.

The militiamen were told to be careful with firearms and to shoot only under the most dire circumstances.

Only three ineffective shots were fired in the bloodless war between Long and Walmley, two at a prowler and one an accidental discharge.

Mike Moss, formerly prominent in New Orleans business and politics, appeared Wednesday to testify before a federal grand jury in a wholesale investigation of income tax returns of Senator Long and his political associates.

Long Holds Books

NEW ORLEANS.—(P)—The Long-Walmley war settled down after a seizure Tuesday after court action failed to demobilize the National Guardsmen called out by Senator Huey P. Long a week ago to seize the voters' registration books.

Production Estimate Compares With 13,047,000 Last Year

LEAST SINCE 1905

Probable Arkansas Production Set at 756,000 Bales

WASHINGTON.—(P)—An indicated cotton crop of 9,195,000 bales this year was announced Wednesday by the Department of Agriculture in its first official forecast of the season.

Last year 13,047,000 bales were ginned.

This year's acreage is the smallest since 1905.

The Arkansas crop is placed at 57 per cent of normal, with an indicated production of 756,000 bales.

Up $2.45 Per Bale

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Cotton prices responded to the government production forecast Wednesday with a spurt of $2 to $2.45 per bale over Tuesday's closing quotations.

The forecast was some 300,000 bales less than the average advance guess by the trade.

Active buying sent October contracts to 13.63 and December to 13.70.

Up $2.25

A 45-point spurt sent cotton soaring for gains of over $2.00 per bale Wednesday, New York October closing at 13.63. The high was 13.68 and the low for October was 13.21.

November futures closed at 13.70-80; January, 13.86.

Your Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Sleep Out At Night, But Avoid Insects

Once upon a time people had the idea that night air was dangerous to health, so that children and adults were huddled in stuffy rooms during the night.

The superstition was due to the fact that mosquitoes came up in the night carrying malaria, and people who slept out at night were bitten by the mosquitoes and became sick with this disease.

When the fresh air treatment for tuberculosis was introduced, opinions changed rapidly, so that today large homes and some apartment houses are equipped with sleeping porches.

In the summer many people like to camp out and sleep in the open air. The healthfulness of the procedure on hot nights cannot be questioned.

Certainly, circulating fresh air is healthful to everyone. Furthermore, on exceedingly hot nights the open air is much cooler than sleeping between any kind of walls or under coverings.

You should realize, however, that there are certain hazards that can be avoided. If you understand them, there is the danger of biting by mosquitoes, which is easily overcome through use of mosquito netting. Any one who sleeps in the outdoors, on any kind of a bed, ought to be protected against foraging mosquitoes.

There is no reason why an outdoor bed should be any less comfortable than one indoors. Nowadays, reasonable prices are asked for couches which have simple springs and mattress suspended from a triangular frame work. The suspended bed is less likely to be invaded by insects or other pests than the one which rests upon the ground.

You can also provide such a swinging couch with a folding top, like that of a perambulator, for the baby. This may be used in case rain develops suddenly, or when there is necessity of keeping off unusual drafts of wind.

There also should be available a rolled oilcloth or other waterproof covering to go over the bedding in case rain comes up.

Don't think, however, that sleeping outdoors carries with it any panacea against all types of illness. There is no all-in-one road to health. It is more important to get plenty of rest and sleep indoors than one or two hours outdoors.

For those who like the outdoor air, however, and for those who enjoy camping, sleeping under proper conditions under the open sky may be exceedingly delightful.

A Tough Ruler—But His Land Was Happy—Here's a Satiric Novel on a Ruthless Dictator

By BRUCE CATTON

Last year a number of us got all excited about a book called "The Journey of the Flame," by Antonio del Ferrio Blanco. It was an unusual book, filled with salt wit and romantic incident. We wanted to see more of the same.

Now this author has given us another—"Rico, Bandit and Dictator"—and it is just as much worth reading as the first one was.

This one is a novel about a Latin-American dictator; Rico, who was born in a jungle village, became a bandit at 16, made himself ruler of his country by the time he was 20, ruled despotically for 20 years, and then quietly vanished from the face of the earth—presumably to enjoy his declining years in peace in Europe, with an English mistress and the $50,000,000 or so he had salted away during his reign.

But in addition to being a novel, it is a very sharp satire on modern government, modern customs, and human frailties in general.

Rico puts down crime, for instance, by ordering that when a criminal trial results in an acquittal the lawyers on both sides shall be shot. He permits freedom of the press, but silences criticism by abolishing all advertising and confiscating the estates of editors who displease him.

He orders all army officers to wear uniforms of private soldiers; if any regiment fails to recognize its officers in such dress, the officers are automatically convicted of neglect of duty and are executed.

As a result of his iron-handed rule, his land is free from crime, dissension, revolt and high taxes—and everybody is happy.

It all makes a pungent and entertaining book. Published by Houghton-Mifflin, it retails at $2.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Vacation's Time for Teaching Things Not Learned in School

Vacation days are the time to teach children those things they do not get in school.

In doing so it is better not to mention the words "teach" or "study" to the child.

When one thinks of it, the best lessons learned by the roadside of life and gained through our own interest do not come out of books.

Take trees, for instance. Unless we have deliberately shut our eyes, and our mouths from asking names, our best tree knowledge has come from the trees near them. And so it is with flowers and birds. As for the stars, we have had to look into books or charts for them, because there are so few people to ask.

They're Eager to Learn

Children are avid to learn. How many city children know whether beans grow on plants or in the ground? Or whether lima beans grow like grapes. Or how grapes grow?

Perhaps you say it doesn't matter whether they know or not. Well, perhaps not, but any new fact added to one's store of knowledge makes life just that much more interesting. If nothing else, it gives us a "look" of knowing and adds to personality.

We look at the stars nightly for dozens of years. Yet how many of us know their names, except some of the planets? How many of us had to ply to our encyclopedias when "Ardurus" opened the big fair?

Why, then, let children do as we have done, go stupidly through life under the big canopy and not know the names of the luminaries that few people have found use for except to say, "How beautiful!" It isn't enough. The knowing eye enjoys beauty infinitely more than the unknowing one.

Trees are fascinating. To know their names is a thrill. Stop and count. How many varieties can you identify off hand? One need not learn the names of all the thousands, but even a hundred will add to one's beauty education and give a feeling of importance. There may be only a dozen or twenty in the immediate vicinity of where you live. How about teaching the child the names of these?

Birds and Flowers

Too bad so many flowers have long botanical names. Delphinium, galaridia, scapularia, nicotiana, pyrethrum, salpiglossis, all are just fragrant pink, blue or yellow posies after all. Too bad flowers insist on text-book names. Some one should rename such as these.

Birds? A lady asked the other day what a bright red bird was that whistled like a boy. It was a cardinal with that top knot and that whistle; and she has been through two colleges. She says she only knows two birds.

Thus it goes. Of course we can't know everything. But don't let the children grow up without knowing the names of nature's children. Some day they'll be glad.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Avoid Worry to Acquire Beauty

"Why, my dear, what on earth has happened to you? I positively didn't recognize you! You look at least ten years younger than when I saw you last!"

Have you ever heard one friend say that to another? And usually, if you investigate, you will find that what has happened to the one who looks ten years younger is nothing more or less than that something has made her happier than she was. It may be that she has fallen in love, or contracted a happy marriage. Or she may have succeeded suddenly in her work.

Give Up Fretting

Or better still, she may have learned the lesson that we all need to learn: revolt and high taxes—and everybody is happy.

It all makes a pungent and entertaining book. Published by Houghton-Mifflin, it retails at $2.

Watchful Waiting

learn—how to extract a measure of contentment from whatever life offers.

If you want to look prettier, younger and healthier, set your mind on happiness. Resolve that you will give up fretting over trifles that you can't do anything about.

No matter how busy you may be, set aside a little time every day for some pursuit that really gives you pleasure—reading, playing the piano, looking at beautiful pictures, even cooking if that's what you like and never get a chance to do.

Worry Makes Lines

Steel yourself to make decisions and keep to them without regret. Many facial lines are caused by vacillating worry over whether or not you've done the right thing. You've done all you can do when you've done your best, and worry won't mend mistakes anyway.

Practice laughing, or at least smiling. Learn to see, take and tell a joke. Don't brood, and if your feelings have been hurt, go to the person who did it, and talk your grievance out. That will clear the air and also your complexion. Not to speak of what it will do to brighten your eyes and beautify your expression.

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

NANCY was sitting very straight on the sofa, her eyes wary, her expression defiant. Before her, in Miss Rosa's most comfortable chair, was Jane.

"Oh, hello, Jane," said Amy. "I didn't know you were here. When did you come?"

"Last night, quite unexpectedly," said Jane sweetly. "How are you, dear—how well you look!"

The tone made Amy understand that her dress was old and out of fashion, her hair even more so, and her hair struggling, and she could scarcely keep from smiling.

Nancy could keep still no longer. "Mother, Miss Terry's been asking me to visit her in New York. She'd like me to come and stay as long as I want."

"What a nice invitation to come right out of the blue!" said Amy. "And I was saying, 'went on Nancy quickly, 'that I was sorry, but I couldn't possibly do it—mean, there's so much here and—"

Jane broke in with a composure so perfect that no one might guess rancor beneath. "I wish you'd let her come, Amy—you must think it odd, my speaking to her about it without talking it over with you first, but—well—my old friend's daughter—and all that—and I could give her a very good time. I've a wonderful penthouse apartment and my own car and chauffeur—I motored here, by the way—and I was thinking of Europe this summer, and what fun it would be to have someone young and fresh and gay—and so very pretty—to go with me."

"Mother and Father and young Howard and I were in Europe last summer," said Nancy. "We had the most marvelous time. I wouldn't really care to go so soon again."

"You see, Jane—Nancy makes her own decisions," said Amy. "She's—she's like her mother in that."

Nancy was restless and uneasy. "Yes, I am," she said, "and so, though I am very sweet of you to think of it, I really can't do it. Mother, we ought to be going home. It's nearly time for lunch."

"I haven't been up to see Miss Rosa yet," said Amy. "You can run on ahead, if you want, and get things ready."

"All right," said Nancy. "I'll do that. Goodbye, Miss Terry—I do appreciate your asking me." She shook hands with Jane and went out quickly, pattingly glad to get away.

"Why did you do it, Jane?" asked Amy. "Do you really want her?"

JANE lit a cigaret. "Oh, I don't know. It was a bunch, an impulse. I'm lonely sometimes. I've made heaps of money, Amy. I got out of the market at the right time and I've watched my properties and my investments. I've probably lost as little as anybody in America during this depression, hardly enough to notice it. And when Nancy came in here today, so alive, and so awfully pretty (and after all she is my child, Amy), I thought suddenly that I'd like to give her a chance."

"Oh, I see. A chance for what exactly?"

"A chance to get out of this slow little city and right into the middle of things. A chance for luxury, travel, lovely clothes, meeting people whose names are in the papers all the time, theaters, music, art, all that sort of thing."

"If anyone had come along and offered me the same thing when I was her age I'd have had my trunks packed by this time! Oh, well, that's that! And how about you, Amy—I needn't ask, I suppose. How do you keep your complexion! It's really marvelous. And Aunt Rosa tells me that besides being a faculty lady you're Marburg's musical leader, that you manage concerts and run choruses and what not. Apparently you thrive on it, too. I should think you'd be bored to tears!"

"Jane," said Amy, very solemnly, "if you are born with a small-town nature you never change! That's what ails me, I imagine. And now, I must go along home. I won't have time to see Miss Rosa today but I'll be in soon again. How long are you staying?"

"Only a day or two. Probably I'll go tomorrow."

SHE went with Amy to the door and in the brighter light they looked at one another with appraising interest. Amy saw an elegant and exquisite woman whose beauty had been cherished and cared for in every possible way.

Jane also saw a beautiful woman, but one who was neither elegant nor exquisite, rather disheveled, and if not actually dowdy, at least two years behind the current mode.

"Goodbye, Jane," said Amy. "I'm glad I saw you. I'm very glad, you know, I thought I hated you. I did hate you for a while. There were two years after that pneumonia of Howard's when it was touch and go with his lungs, and I certainly hated you then, for I blamed you for it. But I must have forgotten about hating you after he got better. . . . And that's why I'm glad. I shouldn't like to think I could have lived as happily as I've lived all this time and kept on hating anyone. I'm glad of your success. It's the kind you always wanted. I hope you'll always have it, and enjoy it, and I believe you will. You're that sort." She leaned forward and patted Jane's arm.

"Goodbye," she said again.

"I'm glad I told her that," thought Amy, as she went home. "It was very strange to reach into my feelings for the old hate and find it gone. And I told her to stay out of my life and, on the surface, she certainly stayed. But in reality she's been a constant part of it for she gave me one of my greatest joys, Nancy. I love Nancy so dearly as much as I do young Howard that I'd be puzzled to tell the difference."

At her own door she was met by a reproachful Nancy. "What on earth kept you so long? I've been dying to see you and tell you all

That woman! The great big nerve of her! Patronizing me and telling me that Marburg is a dump."

"My heavens, don't howl around now! She meant to be kind, you know! She didn't need a lot of preliminaries to invite the child of one of her oldest friends to see her. And she could have given you a very good time."

"So she informed me, down her nose! Well, I just stared at her, trying so hard to be youthful, and you know, Mother, when you think about a woman 'how young she looks' it's a sure sign that her real youthfulness is gone. And acting as if Marburg was totally inhabited by a moron peasantry! I wouldn't have gone if she had offered me a diamond ring and a ruby hush!

Mother—I didn't like her—I didn't like her one bit!"

"Oh, Nancy!" cried Amy in sudden awful dismay. "don't say that! It came to her with a rush, that she could have devised no more terrible judgment of Jane than those words uttered in that way by Jane's own child. 'She has lots of good qualities. She has, really.'"

"You can write me a list of 'em sometime," said Nancy, still wrathful. "It won't take more than half a second. The worst thing was she said she hoped I wouldn't be content to settle down like you and live in this dull college life! Oh, was I sore! Mother, look here—are you sorry you married Father? Is it awful to be a faculty lady at a small college? Do you feel humiliated and thwarted? Did you ever feel that way?"

"There's a special reason for your asking that, isn't there? A special reason, with initials R.C."!

Gorgeous color flooded Nancy's face. "All the more why you should give me the real lowdown, isn't there?" she demanded.

Amy did not insist on her guess. Nancy should tell her in her own time, in her own way. Instead she answered, honestly: "Nancy, I've loved every minute that I've been married to Howard, and—oh, just take a good look at me, silly! Do I look cramped and thwarted? We've never had much money and I've always had to work pretty hard, but we haven't had quarrels and pettiness and commonness or misunderstandings, or the slightest shadow of unfaithfulness—a d d those are the things I couldn't bear. No, any way you look at it, I'm a contented, happy woman."

And at the same moment Jane was gazing at her satisfactory reflection in the shining old pier-glasses in Miss Rosa's parlor, thinking: "I've certainly had a narrow escape from a wild impulse! I must have been gaga to want to take the girl, brought up as she's been, and so obstinate! She'd never have fitted into my life. And there would always have been the contrast—of age! I have so much, my friends, my work—any way you look at it, I'm a most happy, contented, fortunate woman!" She added to herself, smiling, "Poor old Amy!"

Storks Win First and Tie Up Second

Defeat Atlanta 12 to 8—Darkness Ends Second at 2-2

ATLANTA, Texas.—Darkness halted the second game between Hope and Atlanta here Tuesday afternoon with the score tied at 2-2, after the visiting Storks had taken the opener of the Two States League double-header 12 to 8.

The nightcap was called at the end of the fifth. Manager "Bear" Allday of the Rabbits had smashed a home run in the second inning.

Vernon Schooley, Hope shortstop, had a perfect batting record in the first game, hitting five out of five—a two-bagger and four singles.

Five Hope runs overcame Atlanta's 8-7 lead in the ninth inning.

Elliott, Hope second sacker, homered in the eighth, and Stone of Atlanta followed suit in the same inning.

Kelly hurled the opener for Hope, with Bernard Henderson opposing. Mays of Atlanta and McKee of Hope pitched the deadlock.

It takes so little to make us sad; Just a slighting word or a doubting sneer, Just a scornful smile on some lips held dear, And our footsteps lag, the goal seemed near, And we lose the courage and hope we had— So little it takes to make us sad. Just the cheering clasp of a friendly hand, Just a work from one who can understand, And we finish the task we long had planned, And we lose the doubt and fear we had— So little it takes to make us glad.

Transcontinental Run Made on $31

Magnolia Economy Test Covers Route of 3,019 Miles

Using Mobiloil and Mobilgas exclusively, and Airflow De Solo has just crossed America, from New York to San Francisco at an entire cost of $31.77 for gas and oil, according to data received from the technical staff of the Magnolia Petroleum company, refiner and distributors of Mobiloil and Mobilgas. No attempt was made to set any speed records, as the trip was purely an economy test, officially supervised and sanctioned by the American Automobile Association, to show how little it need cost the average motorist to cross the country in a modern car using modern gasoline and motor oil.

The test was followed with intense interest by Magnolia dealers and agents throughout the Southwestern states as it verified their statements regarding the economy of these world famous products. An officially economy mark of 21.42 miles per gallon of gasoline was not on the 3,019 mile trip and the Mobiloil was changed each 1,000 miles, no other additional oil being used. Harry Hartz, famous racing driver, who piloted the car, termed the transcontinental run a real test of Mobiloil and Mobilgas.

"Four days of travel over roads of all descriptions in altitudes ranging from sea level to 7,537 feet, in heat and cold, showed us that Mobiloil and Mobilgas perform under any and all conditions," Mr. Hartz said. "It is a comforting fact to know that these products are of uniform high quality right across America and will give perfect performance in any climate or altitude without even a minor carburetor adjustment."

Mobiloil and Mobilgas were purchased at Secony-Vacuum stations on route and the trip was made in about the same time a train would require for the journey. About 38 miles per hour actual driving time was made, in spite of headwinds, rains, sandstorms and other trials which proved the ability of Mobilgas and Mobiloil to maintain consistently satisfactory performance under any circumstances.

NORWOOD CHARGES

keep on, knowing sooner or later somebody will beat him.

The man doesn't live who can get away with what Norwood has gotten away in these hard years.

His reference to "buck private" is silly.

Everyone knows why I filed that editorial "The General Meets a Buck Private."

Norwood had boasted that he was a first-class lawyer and Carl Bailey was only a second-class lawyer.

His employees call Norwood "The General." If a first-class lawyer is a General, that would make a second-class lawyer a Buck Private, wouldn't it?

Why talk about the war? What the people of Arkansas are concerned about on August 14th isn't the war—but the "war debts" Hal Norwood has helped to saddle upon this state as a first-class lawyer who consistently advised the State Highway Department wrong.

Norwood says Claude Duty wrote the cost-plus contract opinion "without any knowledge."

Nobody but a man 50 years in public office would have the audacity to declare that he turned the most important financial opinion of his entire administration over to a subordinate.

It isn't true and you, Mr. Citizen, know it isn't true.

For everything that is printed in this newspaper I am responsible.

For every opinion issued by the attorney general's office Norwood is responsible.

If I were to make a conjecture, I would be this: Norwood had Duty do his dirty work for him—and then when things got hot the General fed Duty to the fish. What I mean is, he threw him overboard.

Naturally Duty didn't like it. So he's in somebody else's camp this year, and about as welcome as you can imagine anybody would be welcome around a political camp with the pungent smell of a fresh scandal hanging in his clothes.

MISS REED SCORES

row from the R. F. C. "Harvey Couch says if a bank in Chicago could borrow 95 million dollars then the whole state of Arkansas ought to be able to borrow half that much."

Miss Reed scored conditions at the state penitentiary, where 14 convicts were shot to death, charging that it was "peculiar that escaping men should be shot in the face." She asked: "Did you ever see an escaping man run backward?"

She scored the use of convict guards, and the practice of keeping men guards at the women's prison farm, resulting in the death of Helen Spence Eaton.

Miss Reed further charged that executions at Tucker Farm were made public spectacles, open to everybody, notwithstanding the fact that the law severely limits such attendance.

She said that conditions were deplorable at the State Hospital for Nervous Diseases, asserting that when a Kingsland patient died in the hospital his relatives sent up $100 to the hospital to prepare him for the funeral; but when they went to the hospital his body was delivered to them for burial stark naked.

POLL TAX LAW

may be held August 14 in all residents of the county, regardless of whether they possess poll tax receipts.

A total of 5,000 persons is expected to cast ballots in the primary as a result of the action, officials said, although the total vote at the last primary was only 1,776.

Members of the committee said the action was taken because of distress among residents of the county as a result of the drought and depressed business conditions, explaining that the number of poll taxes paid has been reduced drastically.

The vote of the committee was 14-7 in favor of the action.

Subject to Fine

LITTLE ROCK.—In its ruling on poll taxes Tuesday the Scott County Democratic Central Committee ignored an Arkansas law which has been incorporated as a part of the rules of the Democratic party in this state.

Section 89 of the party rules, which is a statute, read as follows: "No person shall be allowed to vote at any primary election held under the law of this state, who shall not exhibit a poll tax receipt or other evidence that he has paid his poll tax within the time prescribed by law to entitle him to vote at the succeeding general state election."

Section 93 (also a statute) makes it a misdemeanor for "knowingly causing a vote when the voter is not a qualified elector as provided herein."

Under this provision, those who vote in Scott county without poll taxes and election officials who accept the ballots will be liable for a fine of from $100 to $500 and a jail sentence of from 30 days to 12 months.

Furthermore, the laws provide that in an election contest, any ballot cast by a voter who is not a qualified elector may be thrown out.

Records in the state auditor's office show that 3,000 poll tax receipt blanks were sent to Scott county this year, and that the collector issued 2,756 and returned 244 unused.

Will Rogers at Saenger Thursday

"Handy Andy" Co-Stars Comedian With Peggy Wood

Will Rogers is uproarious in "Handy Andy" which opens at the Saenger theater Thursday according to reports from Little Rock. In the picture his wife, Peggy Wood, wants him to play—and he does. And thereby hangs most of the hilarious situations that go to make this his funniest picture.

Things in smoothly as long as Rogers is in his druggery. But when he sells out and starts to play, he finds life complicated. First he raises pigs, until they escape into the house. Then he tries golf with screamingly funny results.

But the climax comes when he goes with his wife to New Orleans to attend the Mardi Gras. He refuses to attend the ball with her. Later, however, wandering around alone, he encounters a fellow druggist and his lovely girl friend Conchita Montenegro.

Mellowed by a few cocktails, Will attends the ball with her. Later, however, he chooses a leopard skin as his costume. A few more cocktails lend him the courage to try an adagio dance with the lithe Conchita. Then the fun begins. His rough and tumble dance starts a fight that ends in a riot. And there's a surprise ending that hasn't been divulged in advance of the showing.

Boss Pendergast Sweeps Missouri

Kansas City Machine Nominates Truman for U. S. Senator

ST. LOUIS.—An overwhelming victory for the Kansas City Democratic organization of T. J. Pendergast in Tuesday's primary election was indicated Wednesday as Harry S. Truman increased his lead in the senatorial race to more than 73,000 votes.

Returns from 2,506 of the state's 4,269 precincts gave Truman 188,024 votes; Representative John J. Cochran 114,792 and Representative Jacob L. Milligan, 85,325.

The figures included 418 precincts in Jackson county—center of Truman's strength, and 267 in St. Louis, home of Cochran. Milligan, supported by Senator Bennett Champ Clark for the nomination, obtained a large share of his strength from rural territory.

Political observers said Truman, having an unexpected show of strength by one of his rivals, was assured of the nomination and would meet Senator Roscoe Patterson, unopposed for the Republican nomination, in November.

Dr. Brinkley Defeated

TOPEKA, Kan.—(AP)—Supporters of Governor A. M. Landon, Republican, claimed his nomination Tuesday night on the basis of early returns from the primary giving him a 5-1 lead over his only opponent, Dr. John R. Brinkley.

A scientist reports that the universe is 6,000-million light years in diameter. Some day one of these scientists will make a statement that we will catch him on.

An English aviator has built a model airplane with automatic controls that is flown successfully with a motor of this make and design.

"Engineers have not found a place for a dam to make this possible," he stated. "I have a responsibility. I can't build a dam unless I have the best engineering assurance that it is not only the right thing, but the safe thing to do."

But he did promise an early conference to review intensive studies being made of the project.

The presidential special reached Minneapolis, heart of one of the country's most troublesome strikes, for a brief stop at midnight. The train proceeded during the night to Rochester, Minn., where the president stops Wednesday to participate in honoring the Mayo brothers, whose nationally known clinic is established there.

Thus supplies would be kept at about the level of consumption plus amounts assured of sales abroad.

LONG HOLDS

hold the books until the September primary election of two members of the national house of representatives, Representative Paul Maloney and J. O. Fernandez endorsed by Long are being opposed by two Walmsey candidates.

Possession of the registration books gives the Long candidates a great advantage. Walmsey supporters say they were not permitted to register and would not be permitted to vote.

A Cool Laxative For Hot Weather

It's more pleasant and better if you refresh your stomach when you take a laxative in hot weather. Just chew a delicious Fennel-mint chewing gum laxative. All you swallow is the beneficial cooling mint flavor, helpful saliva juices and a laxative which you never taste. Doctors prescribe this laxative ingredient in Fennel-mint—and because you chew it, the laxative is distributed more uniformly into the intestines to give a gentle, yet thorough action. Delay is dangerous so today get back on schedule. Chew non-habit forming Fennel-mint for constipation.
